ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

Admission to Aviation Flight at Southern Illinois University Carbondale is determined by a selective admission process in which the most qualified are selected from applicants who meet minimum admission requirements. Admission as an AVIATION FLIGHT APPLICANT (AFAP) does not imply application to, or admission to, Aviation Flight. To be considered for admission to Aviation Flight, you must return the attached application with supporting documents (see checklist on next page). All new students seeking entry to Aviation Flight are admitted to SIUC in the status of Aviation Flight Applicant (AFAP) and must complete this program application.

DELAYED FLIGHT STATUS

Admission to the Aviation Flight program is offered every semester. Some admittees are assigned to "Delayed Flight Status" upon registration for classes. Students in this category are enrolled in appropriate ground schools and related courses. Actual flight instruction, however, may be scheduled to begin the following semester. This is based on instructor availability and student registration date.

FAA MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS*

A current FAA Second Class Medical (or higher) is required for all flight students at SIUC. The certificate is valid for one year after the date of issue. These special medical examinations are given by select physicians authorized by the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration). To identify FAA physicians in your area, search on the website: http://www.flightphysical.com/; you may also contact local airports in your immediate area. These facilities often maintain a list of area physicians authorized to give FAA medicals.

STUDENT PILOT CERTIFICATE*

The FAA requires new student pilots to complete an application for the student pilot certificate through the Integrated Airman Certification and Rating Application (IACRA) or by paper using FAA form 3710-1. You may elect to have this done with an SIU certified flight instructor during your New Student Orientation. It takes approximately three weeks to process, so it should be done prior to your first semester.

PROOF OF CITIZENSHIP *

The Transportation Security Administration TSA requires proof of US citizenship before beginning flight training. You can prove citizenship with a valid US Passport or a certified copy of your government birth certificate (obtained from your birth county courthouse) along with a government issued photo ID. If you are not a US citizen, you will need to register with the TSA on their website: www.flightschoolcandidates.gov before training can begin.

* These should be accomplished after acceptance into Aviation Flight, but before starting the first week of classes at SIU.
